Lamb and Wickham Will Contest, With Montague a Possibility.

Fight Certain in Second-Situation in Fifth and Ninth.

Whether or not ex-Governor Andrew Jackson Montague decides to enter the Face for congressional honors in the Third Virginia District, it is evident that the contest will be interesting. The entries will close next Monday, giving a clear week for the candidates with a little remittance of $750 each.

In other cities they are are in favor of counting a man twice rather than not at all, and if it could be done they would count the dead ones in the cemetery. Birmingham, which had 38,000 ten years ago, claims now that its new population will run up to 140,000, and that already the names of 90,000 men, women and children have been put on the relis. Other cities are just a bit atraid that Richmond will go into the major league class, and for that reason they are nustling.

Checking System Urged.

Much depends, of course, upon the enumerator. If he is on his job he will not let anybody get by; if he is not, they may get by in droves. The point, therefore, is for every citizen to see if this government agent has been around his house or around the homes of his employes. It is not possible to find out how many have been reached. The figures are the private property or the government, and all this talk is guesswork—even the claim of 90,000 put forth by the press agents of Birmingham.

Many cities have adopted a checking system of their own. In Richmond the public schools will get reports to-morrow from the home of every pupil, showing whether or not the enumerators have been there. If there are any missing links the information will be

Virginia delegates to the sixteenth annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which opens in Asheville, N. C., on Wadnesday, will leave here over the Southern Railway at 11:45 o'clock to-night in a special car chartered by John P. Branch. Although the conference only holds a session every four years, Mr. Branch will urge that the next conference be held in Richmond in 1914. The conference met here last in 1886, and Mr. Branch and his associates from this State will make a strong fight to have it return. At the last session of the Virginia Conference the following ministers were named as delegates:

B. F. Lipscomb, James Cannon, Jr., W. J. Young, W. Asbury Christian, J. C. Reed, R. H. Bennett and E. H. Rawlins, Lay delegates are John P. Branch, T. J. Brown, W. C. Ivey, W. H. Vincent, W. W. Vicar, H. C. Barrow and Frank Talbott,

Mr. Canter Also Tells How Church People Once Looked on Telegraph.

O4d-Fellows from every part of the city and from outlying towns assembled yesterday afternoon at the Bijou first anniversary of the foundation of the order. The main feature of the occasion was an oration by the grand chaplain of the Sovereign Grand Lodge, Rev. W. I. Canter, of West Virginia, who was introduced by Licutenant-Governor J. Taylor Elyson.

who was introduced by heatenant-Governor J. Taylor Ellyson.

An appropriate musical program was effectively carried out by Stein's Orchestra and the Grace Street Baptist Church quartet. Miss Isaacs, Haddon S. Watkins and Mrs. George K. Harper being the soloists. At the conclusion of the meeting the audience heartly rang "America."

After the invocation had been offered by Rev. G. W. M. Taylor, Mr. Canter was introduced. He took as his theme the trinity of cardinal principles upon which the Order of Odd-Fellows is founded, "Friendship, Love, Truth." Many anecdotes illustrated his exposition of the great value of friendship and love, as he emphasized the great necessity for the cultivation of such qualities among men. The parable of the Good Samaritan was he said, one that carries a splendid lesson of brotherhood to the world of to-day.

"I'm too busy to darn, yet I can now go to the dresser and always find a good pair of stockings."

HOLEPROOFS are the guaranteed stockings that appeal to the refined person. They are so soft and gentle to the foot. It's because of the fine 70c Egyptian yarn of which they are woven. We guarantee them free from holes for 6 months. Six pairs for women and children, black or tan, $2. Socks for men, 6 pairs, $1.50.

FAKE REWARD HAD CROWD CHASING HIGHWAY ROBBER

Even Press Agent Didn't Expect to Set Town by Ears, but Offer Was Too Rich to Turn Down.

A man with splashes of paste on his shoes and overalls, armed with a bucket, a brush and a roll of bills, stopped on a Broad Street corner last night, glanced furtively to left and right, sasured himself that he was not scrutinized, and then, with two deft strokes of the brush, affixed a fiaring red announcement on a prominent wall, stepped back, surveyed his finished work with the air of an artist, and vanished.

Emblazoned in letters so big that he who ran might read, this proclamation fairly shrieked to the passers-by to stop, peruse and consider:

"Five thousand dollars reward for information which will lead to the capture and arrest of Mr. Wilding, allas William Marshall, alias Captain Swift, wanted for highway robbery and other high crimes. Information as to the whereabouts of this man is wanted at 107 North Eighth Street and tip this off," shouled the man, without solving that he had heard her exposituations. And dragging the woman fairly shrieked to the passers-by to stop, peruse and consider:

SLAY THEM HEREAFTER ON BIG SCREEN OVER STAGE

Bijou Ends Its Season of Melodrama and Thunder, While Lighter Things Will Dazzle Crowds in Front.

Tis pity that the "murder mill" must close, but 'tis true; for the "villyun" can no longer pursue the painted, perioxide heroine across the boards of the Bijon, for in spring a play-goer's fancy turns to vaudeville, and, as with his food, he wants something light and cool and lollipoppy for the summer, rather than something heavy and stirring. So hereafter the gallery gods will glower down in sience and long for the thrill of melodrama.

What statistician could ever compute the number of lives that are lost on that stage every year—that is, lost in the sense of "play like it"? If the villains that are shot to pieces, stabbed and blown up there in a season could be counted the casualties from the battle of Gettysburg would look like a mere trific beside such a list. And all the 'books of martyrs' put together would not include the number of heroes who yearly on those heard.

neet terrible death or snatch the hereine with one hand and shoot the mixture may be put on again, the villain with a pistol in the other all howls of delight will come when the hero has yielded to that heart-rending cry. "Fireman, save me choll-1-1-d."
